UPDATED LIST OF PORTS AND SEA AREAS THAT PROHIBIT DISCHARGES FROM OPEN LOOP SCRUBBERS

Action Required: Members are invited to note the updated information on the list of ports around the world that have prohibited the discharge from open loop Exhaust Gas Cleaning Systems (scrubbers) and to forward it to their member companies for immediate attention. Members are also invited to update the Secretariat about any further information that they or that their member companies can provide on this issue.

Members are aware of the IMO Global sulphur cap of 0.50% sulphur applicable to all marine fuels as from 1st January 2020. Members will also be aware that in addition to using compliant fuel to meet this requirement, there also exists the option to use “equivalent” compliance mechanisms in accordance with Regulation 4 of MARPOL Annex VI, one of which is the use of Exhaust Gas Cleaning System (EGCS) commonly known as Scrubbers.

In this regard the Secretariat had circulated MC(19)04 that contained an initial list of ports around the world that were identified as prohibiting the discharge from open loop scrubbers by ships visiting these ports.

Based on related information from various administrations and feedback received from Members, the Secretariat has updated the list as provided below.
